

What is Geography?

Geography is the study of the physical features and human populations on earth. Geographers look to see how the physical environment and human populations interact, affect and challenge each other.

Physical Geography
Examples

Human Geography
Examples